

Reply to Shijo Kingo
(Shijo Kingo dono-gohenji)

October 22, 1278 (Age 57)

A mighty warrior named General Li Guang, whose mother was devoured by a tiger, shot an arrow at a stone he believed was the tiger. The arrow pierced deep into the stone, up to its feathers. After he realized that it was a stone, he could not lodge another arrow into it. Later, he was called General Stone Tiger. The principle of this story can be applied to your situation. Although enemies may target you, if you uphold resolute faith in the Lotus Sutra, your great obstacles will surely vanish. With this in mind, continue to deepen your faith.

(Gosho p. 1292 / Nichiren Shoshu Monthly January 2024)

Nichiren Shoshu Myosenji

Reply to Shijo Kingo
(Shijo Kingo dono-gohenji)

October 22, 1278 (Age 57)

A mighty warrior named General Li Guang, whose mother was devoured by a tiger, shot an arrow at a stone he believed was the tiger. The arrow pierced deep into the stone, up to its feathers. After he realized that it was a stone, he could not lodge another arrow into it. Later, he was called General Stone Tiger. The principle of this story can be applied to your situation. Although enemies may target you, if you uphold resolute faith in the Lotus Sutra, your great obstacles will surely vanish. With this in mind, continue to deepen your faith.

(Gosho p. 1292 / Nichiren Shoshu Monthly January 2024)

Nichiren Shoshu Myosenji