(“Ueno-dono gohenji”)

December 27, 1280 (Age 59)

I will teach you the path to easily attain Buddhahood. To teach a person something is like greasing the wheels of a heavily loaded cart to ease its movement forward or floating a boat on water so it can effortlessly glide ahead. Similarly, the way to become a Buddha is not especially difficult. It is like giving water to the thirsty in a time of drought or the warmth of a fire to a freezing man. Or, it is like someone in a time of famine who offers his last treasured valuable and then when reduced to the point of death, he unexpectedly receives a gift of food.
